

Fashion and the role of women

Nicdao Maria Zila Musngi

In the past, men were the ones who went out of their homes to search for jobs to earn a living for their families. And what did women do? They either stayed at home to wait for men to court them, or, wait for their husbands to arrive home while they took care of their children and the household chores. Women didn't need to care about how they looked, they dressed modestly. Women weren't given the chance to have jobs, so they didn't have a strict dress code other than to dress simple. Fashion wasn't exactly a big deal in the past.

If you tell me that fashion isn't a big deal today, I would say that you're crazy. Fashion is very much involved with us today. You can't be wearing a mini skirt and a see-through top with a hot pink bra underneath as a secretary going to work in an office. The role of women in the present has become more important and cared about. They no longer stay at home wearing their simple clothes, they get out of their homes and dress whatever they want, which sometimes causes more men to look at them twice instead of once. The variety of jobs for women has increased a lot. Now, women can have their chance of proving that men aren't always better than them. However, the dress code is stricter. Luckily, women are witty. With numerous female designers that design clothes for women, they can dress in a sexy way for fun but conservative for work.

Fashion today changes and gets better every single day. It's you're in today and out the next day. I, on the other hand, think that fashion also allows us to show who we really are, so following the latest trends isn't always needed, instead, why not start a fashion trend yourself?
